her land served with a trespass notice. She then would need to file a police report and proceed with the eviction process through the district court.

[REDACTED] Donis drove to the area and made contact with Lucas Morton. Donis parked on the road due to the driveway being blocked off with rope. Morton walked to the road to speak with Donis. Morton advised there was a court hearing on Wednesday (June 27, 2018) and the judge dismissed the case. Morton accessed the case disposition via his phone and showed it to Donis who briefly reviewed it. During their conversation Morton said he inherited the land from his creator and that he is living on the property with his wife and children. Donis saw a white enclosed box truck and a white plastic-covered area surrounded by dirt berms and tires. Morton was cordial, however, according to Donis, Morton postured and behaved as if he did not want Donis to go onto the property or see much of the property.
